Be prepared and not scared of unperceived everyday risks.

Nonprofits face a certain amount of financial and legal risk merely by operating. Although all risk cannot be eliminated and some risk is expected due to budgetary constraints and the necessity to take chances with new ideas and programs, certain activity (or lack of actions) creates unnecessary risks that can be easily mitigated if identified and understood. More than ever before nonprofits must take proactive and protective steps to avoid unnecessary risk or face the possibility of lost funding or worse.

This conference will take a fresh look at everyday situations that many organizations don't consider to be risky but can negatively affect an organization's well-being and sometimes threaten its very existence.
